

The PAC 10 Gets Ready to Make a Statement

The PAC 10 Conference expects to be a major power when all the conferences get together in 2009

Commissioner Eric Robinson was more than proud to know that his conference will play a major role in the CBSMF Championship slated for 2009.

“It is finally here! A chance to fellowship with other teams in the Shootout system and let everyone know that we can play the game out west too”, remarked Robinson.

With a potential 10 team conference, the PAC 10 could be ranked among the finest conferences in all of the CBS because of the experience factor and dedication of the coaches. Known for power football out west, the PAC 10 comes into the inaugural season looking to show skeptics that they are not just a 2-play attack.

Commissioner Robinson promises some of the best brand of football around! With new coaches like “Shabby J” Partilio and Richard “Bluesman” Garrison coming on board with their own kind of flavor, the PAC 10 looks to be one of the premier conferences in the Shootout league.

It always helps to have the likes of a former LAEFL Champion, David Campbell, who will have his Michigan Wolverines looking to make a run for the title.

Commissioner Robinson sees this as a great opportunity to bring together a great freshman class along with some season veterans in making the PAC 10 the best conference.

With teams like the Michigan Wolverines, coached by former LAEFL Champion, and the Grambling Tigers, which will feature a “Who’s Who of black college legends, will have to play a single conference schedule due to the location of the teams which will be mainly from California and Nevada.

Due to the geography, the PAC 10 could consider having a conference championship. However, the top four finishers are who will still go to the championship round.

Robinson also has expressed an interest in some of the coaches from the Las Vegas region to round out the new PAC 10. One that he has his eye on in particular, Marty Thomas, is a rising star in the Shootout system and has already said the University of Buffalo or Syracuse would be his choice. As Commissioner Robinson and the media wondered, “Who in the heck is University of Buffalo, the future PAC 10 head coach, Marty Thomas was dead serious about the potential to win the PAC 10. “I feel very good about my team and some of the things we can do. I know that is on the pro level but I am sure, I could probably do it on the college level as well”, said Thomas.

With that type of confidence and the potential for great games out west, everyone back east will be tuned in to see their impact. Some games will be carried on Internet TV.

With recent critiques on west coast miniature football for being a style that has perfected the same play, it will be interesting to see the diversity come alive when pressed to face opponents from other division. Robinson feels as if the PAC 10 will definitely be up to the task.
